1 Introduction

Open with the answer. A reader who stops after this paragraph should still know what you recommend and on what evidence.

Body text is set in a serif face because a paper is read continuously, while headings, tables and figures keep the sans of the deck so that both documents belong to the same family. Swap `--serif` for `var(--sans)` in `body` if you prefer an all-sans paper.

1.1 A subsection

Sections and subsections number themselves through CSS counters, so inserting one in the middle does not force a renumbering by hand.

THE QUESTION THIS SECTION ANSWERS

The framed callout is the paper's version of the question frame used on the slides. Use it to state the question a section answers, then answer it in the paragraph that follows.

2 Evidence

Tables carry the same dark header band as the deck.

The one that decides

A qualification: the blue strip carries a caveat that supports the argument without interrupting it.

A caution: the warm strip is reserved for a real warning, at most once per section.

3 Conclusion

Close on the decision, the condition that would change it, and what you are asking the reader to do.

The closing band states the one sentence you want quoted.
